The king is returning after making vast conquests. The procession is passing through the city. People lined up on both sides are hailing the king and his soldiers. Beautiful ladies standing in rows on both sides of the road are showering the winners with flowers. The master novelist seated in a chariot is eagerly noting down all the details. He has accompanied the army throughout the campaign observing and recording everything. Now he will settle down to write the saga of conquests which will go down in history and make him immortal. The author of short stories is not interested in all the pomp and grandeur. He is just nobody standing in the crowd and observing the boy standing at the top of a roof looking at the procession with fear and hope. The boy has been told that his father has lost his life in a battle. But he hopes that the news may be wrong. With every passing contingent his hopes are dying down and he is finding it harder and harder to hold back his tears. He had been comforting his mother so long. The author of short stories will write the mere mortal tale of the little boy and her mother.

Memoirs of the author; an Indian entrepreneur.

The Demon King Du Chunfeng, who had returned to the country to investigate his father's death, jumped off the plane and was saved by the mafia lord. Meet Rodgers, the boy who goes through great trouble to protect his best friend, Juma, from a harsh teacher at school. Penetrating the diversity of cultures, Mickey's loyalty and closeness to her friend Rodgers is exemplary. The myth of discrimination is yet again beautifully dispelled in how Chuna, the young girl with albinism, is loved and adored in her adopted family, despite a few who still show ignorance.
