The only black sand beach in the continental United States is a well-worth-it five-hour drive from Sacramento. It's rugged, sharp, and not ideal for swimming or sunbathing; dogged surfers admire the wild tides and waves from afar since the waters are too dangerous to enter. But the unparalleled beauty leaves every visitor supremely satisfied.

10 JUNE 2018. At the end of last year, scientists discovered a small octopus city - dubbed Octlantis - a find that suggests members of the gloomy octopus species (Octopus tetricus) are perhaps not the isolated and solitary creatures we thought they were. Octlantis features dens made out of piles of sand and shells, and is home to up to 15 of the cephalopods, according to marine biologists.
