This comprehensive examination of extensive reading shows how reading large quantities of books and other materials can provide students with essential practice in learning to read and help them develop a positive attitude towards reading, which is sometimes missed in second language classes. The authors first examine the cognitive and affective nature of reading and then offer a wealth of practical advice for implementing extensive reading with second language learners. Suggestions are provided for integrating extensive reading into the curriculum, establishing a library, selecting reading materials, and keeping records for purposes of evaluation. The text also describes a wide variety of classroom activities to supplement individualized silent reading. The information will be useful both for pre-service teachers and for teachers and administrators who want to improve the teaching of reading in their second language programs.

This lively collection of over 100 classroom activities allows teachers to exploit fully the language learning potential of extensive reading. The activities, contributed by teachers who have used them successfully in classrooms all over the world, introduce extensive reading to students, and link it with the rest of the language curriculum. Here is a wealth of ideas for encouraging students to read, and for using students reading experiences for further language practice and learning. These creative and enjoyable speaking, listening, role play, reading, writing, and vocabulary activities are suitable for students of all ages and levels. Each activity is clearly explained, together with a personal note from its author. This is a understanding of extensive reading for English as a Foreign Language learners. It is also meant to help readers read with ease and enjoyment. Designing a viable extensive reading program that meets the expectations and learning needs of Moroccan university students would unquestionably be a positive step toward more effectively facilitating English language learning in Moroccan higher education. In fact, this program aims to make reading more enjoyable and fruitful. Thus, students will no longer feel that reading is a mere chore, but will instead view it as both a leisure activity and an excellent academic habit. It should be noted that reading for pleasure is the best way to become literate and knowledgeable. Given this, the aforementioned program will be mainly premised upon students' determination and commitment, and also teachers' planning and preparation, in order to overcome the constraints at both the curricular and pedagogical levels. The elements listed below are of paramount importance in designing an effective extensive reading program that both meets the learning needs of Moroccan university students and drastically changes their attitudes toward reading in English.

Using a framework based on principles of teaching and learning, this guide for teachers and teacher trainees provides a wealth of suggestions for helping learners at all levels of proficiency develop their reading and writing skills and fluency. By following these suggestions, which are organized around four strands – meaning-focused input, meaning-focused output, language-focused learning, and fluency development – teachers will be able to design and present a balanced program for their students.
