Today, financial clients are profoundly skeptical. They've been burned. Their consultants and advisors talk too much, use too much confusing technical jargon, work from too many boilerplate scripts, repeat too many generic caveats and useless disclaimers. Above all, clients say, their advisors don't listen well, and don't link their own needs and views to the recommendations they present. To succeed in today's radically new environment, financial advisors must first transform the way they communicate. In The Financial Professional's Guide to Communication, one of the world's leading experts on the financial client relationship shows them how to do precisely that. Drawing on his experience training elite financial professionals worldwide, Bob Finder shows how to actively listen, speak plainly with precision and passion, and engage clients with uncommon effectiveness. Finder demonstrates how to focus relentlessly on what matters most to each individual client, and then deliver intensely relevant recommendations with clarity and impact, in your own voice. You'll learn how to bring imagination, creativity, and even entertainment to your presentations and conversations, and use constructive criticism to keep improving with every new client meeting. Using these proven techniques, you can deliver truly extraordinary levels of professionalism and service, gain the powerful new competitive edge you're desperately searching for - and earn equally powerful rewards for yourself.

What is a winning strategy? Why do some people, families, and organizations take a dive, some merely survive, while others thrive? What leads up to a disaster or collapse? Why do some squander success, while others continue to elevate? How do we build a solid foundation that assures solid, authentic growth? Me We Do Be is the result of research that has spanned twenty-five years at the intersection of sociology and economics. Specifically, I have explored what behaviors lead to disaster, recovery, or prosperity. As an economist, I measure the financial effects caused by disasters and other detrimental conditions. In other words, when disaster strikes, I am often called in to compute the business and real estate damages. Appraisers measure value, but I measure the loss of value. Moreover, also being a sociologist, I keep my eye on the people behind the statistics as I develop the strategies to move forward. It is a narrow consulting niche involving research, valuation, negotiation, and strategy, and it has provided unique access to interesting people and places around the globe. The journey began in the 1980s when I was a graduate student at UCLA studying leadership and business models. In the 1990s, I directed a national practice at the world's largest consulting firm. My research expanded as I walked the reactors at Chernobyl and cut through the jungles around the Bikini Atoll radioactive nuclear test sites. I have worked on cases ranging from the O. J. Simpson and JonBenet Ramsey crime scenes to the bizarre Heaven's Gate Cult mass-suicide mansion. In the 2000s, there was more. I was stunned as I stood on a curb in New York and watched smoke billowing from the World Trade Center and picked up debris on a rural field in Pennsylvania where Flight 93 had crashed on 9-11. I walked the beaches stained by the BP Oil Spill and inspected thousands of homes torn apart by Hurricane Katrina. As a socio-economist I have worked on these and hundreds of other cases around the world. More importantly, I have studied their ultimate resolution. While some reporters drop in and rush off to the next story, I have stayed to talk to the people long after the news vans drive away. Furthermore, I have been an adviser in countless boardrooms where we discussed cases involving billions of dollars. A crisis exposes a person's or organization's true character, and this yields some invaluable insights. In all, I had accumulated a mountain of information and I wanted to organize it within a practical framework. My objective was to find a model that children could understand and that a CEO would take seriously. I considered using the ancient Greek paradigm of "ethos, pathos, and logos" and a more modern framework of "mental, social, spiritual, and physical." Of course, there was the standard, "mind, body, and soul," as well as many other models. All of these struck me as good, but none of them struck me as complete. It was as if they were playing some of the keys of the piano, but not the whole keyboard. I simply wanted a clear, complete framework. My quest for the ideal model ultimately came to me on the Marianas Islands as I sat in deep thought for three consecutive days. The answer was simple: Just as all great structures have four cornerstones, there are four cornerstones of all great pursuits. These can be summed up as Me We Do Be. Me refers to habits that build quality thinking and wisdom, We habits build relationships, Do habits build productivity, and Be habits build the future. In the pages that follow, I will use this Me We Do Be framework as we explore some of the most fascinating places on Earth, learn from the experiences of some extraordinary people, and look at classic behavioral research. This is all set out within the four Me We Do Be sections, twenty-one short chapters, and about one hundred individual lessons. The objective of each lesson is to encourage discussion on essential life skills. On top of that, more than five thousand people from all fifty states, Australia, and the United Kingdom participated in our Rich Habits Survey.¹ Here, my research staff and I surveyed professionals, students, stay-at-home moms, retirees, the unemployed, and multi-millionaires. We studied dozens of rituals ranging from writing thank-you notes to eating together as a family. We then statistically correlated various habits with different measures of success such as education, wealth, quality relationships, and an overall sense of happiness. Obviously, some people define success as making money. I joke that money doesn't make anyone happy, but it's a great way to be miserable! However, some might define success as a happy family life, finding true love, or winning a competition. Some see success as contributing to a worthy cause, completing a degree, or mastering a musical instrument. Others view success as healing from an emotional wound, beating cancer, or connecting with the divine. Some see success as being a leader or building a huge name for themselves, while others just want the satisfaction of quietly doing great work. Many define success as a combination of things. I respect the perception that there is no one-size-fits-all for success. Here, we define what success means to us individually, but in so doing, we will look at the foundational elements that apply to us all. The research and science is clear: however you define "success," daily habits, rituals, and routines are the key to either tragedy or triumph. Just as one bad habit ripples out until a life is destroyed, it is also true that one new good habit can ripple out and create something magnificent. Today's habits, rituals, and routines are tomorrow's destiny, and minor adjustments bring major rewards. Indeed, the four cornerstones of Me We Do Be lay the foundation of every great pursuit. They bring results that are positive, profound, and permanent. We have absolutely no control over most things, like the weather or the global economy. The only thing we really control is ourselves and the habits we choose. We dictate when we get up, what we eat, what we say and how we think. Focusing on a proven set of rich habits is simply the most direct way to building a rich life.

Creating Valuable Business Strategies will change existing mindsets about strategy. Here is an answer for the strategist who asks, 'What should I do differently next Monday morning?'. The object of strategy is to create financial value and the offering-centred approach of Creating Valuable Business Strategies provides a novel and pragmatic framework for setting strategic direction: choosing which markets to contest and how. This book: * Identifies the individual offering as the fundamental unit of strategy--the choices that customers make regarding individual offerings are at the root of a company's financial success. * Provides an innovative and comprehensive approach to profitable business strategy--designing each offering and also the collection as a whole. * Explains that strategy is a task for all businesses with offerings, even the smallest, not just the giants. The book first sets the scene and makes the case that each value-adding offering needs a competitive strategy: it must have a winning competitive position and use one or more winning resources. It provides the reader with a rich classification of how an offering can be competitively positioned vis-à-vis rival offerings and customers. Winning resources and why offerings need them is discussed next. Corporate strategy, i.e. the managing of the company's whole collection of offerings is then examined. This is followed by a discussion of the implications for organizing and structuring for an offering-centred approach to strategy. Finally all the aspects of this new framework that may meet with resistance are explored. Creating Valuable Business Strategies is essential reading for anyone who is involved in designing tomorrow's offerings: from the backroom specialist to the CEO. It has a clear logical presentation with a focus on practical implementation.
